“ Chris popped into my head today so I felt compelled to share some memories I had with him :) We weren't that close, mostly saw him through mutual friends but he was always sweet to me and made me laugh with some weird comment he'd make. I'll never forget the time when I was visiting family in Buffalo and he invited me over to his new dorm. My brother-in-law supplied me with "donations" of liquor that was from my grandfathers house. I had never seen him light up so much as when we handed him a bottle of my grandfathers John Begg, he was so thankful. We spent the night hanging out, drinking, watching hockey and later downing mac and cheese like bandits that he stole from his roommate. It's still hilarious looking back. RIP Chris, your up with the sea monkeys <3

“ I remember the great time we had exploring the Reed Gold Mine, Kings Mountain Battlefield & Reedy Creek trails as well as a few other places we went in North Carolina. I loved going in the woods next to our house to the ponds and the old Randall estate. We had so many good times exploring Chris. I really miss you. I love you God Bless Rest in Peace.

“ Hey Chris,

I didn't know you that well but then talked for hours on end. In a way I knew you more than people that met you once, if that makes sense? I guess we always connected in that tragic sort of way... and we listened to the same 90s music and knew random film/camera editing shit. You always understood more of my esoteric b.s. than I'd expect anyone to. The last time I spoke with you, I said that I'd talk to you later that I was busy. I meant that but I never got to do that... I guess, the world is not endless and full of time after all.

“ My precious son, Chris, you were the light of my life and my whole world for all your life. I never thought I would have only one child, but you were loved and in my thoughts and prayers every day. I always looked forward to your calls and always waited to hear from you on facebook. I was on facebook because of you. I checked every morning first thing when I got up. My life is now changed forever and will never be the same without hearing your special voice. I will learn to go on, but, it will be the hardest thing I will ever have to do. I will think of you every day for the rest of my life and will see you again in heaven one day. It is going to be a very rough road for me especially since we were so, so very close. The whole Scheyder side of the family will be thinking and praying for you every day, especially Nanny. You will be missed by more friends and family than you ever could imagine. I love you Chris and you will be truly missed. Love forever & ever., Mom
