“ John was a loving husband to Irene for 47 years, and he was her caregiver for many months as she battled cancer. Irene had always been the heart of the Searing family, but John stepped in and took over that role when he needed to. Once Irene passed, John became the caregiver for Dan and helped him to be more independent. John also babysat his grandson, Ryan, after school for 5 years until his parents got off work. John was quick to help his family in whatever need they had.

John was a good neighbor and helper in his community and the neighbors have responded to Dan with love and kindness. Dan needed comfort when John passed, and the neighbors have provided that and continue to do so. Dan is so blessed to live in the community where he does, and to have those friends.

John taught his children to be self sufficient and hard working. He taught them to always do what is right, even when it wasn't popular. He taught them that integrity and honesty were far more valuable than money. He sacrificed for his family and enjoyed doing so.

I was blessed to have John as my dad. He had accepted Christ as his savior, so I know Dad is in heaven now, and he is happier than he has ever been. I miss him dearly, but I will see him again, and I will hug him with all my strength.
